

Lab Alley Achieves Halal Certification, Expands Commitment to Quality and Customer Satisfaction

[Austin, TX, February 13, 2025] – Lab Alley, a leading provider of natural, essential, and high-purity chemicals, proudly announces its achievement of Halal certification for a selection of its chemical products. This certification ensures Lab Alley's offerings comply with Islamic dietary laws, affirming that ingredients and production processes adhere strictly to guidelines outlined in the Quran and other Muslim texts.

Halal certification signifies that Lab Alley's chemicals are free from prohibited animal products, alcohol, and other specified ingredients, ensuring purity and adherence to strict hygienic standards. All manufacturing equipment dedicated to Halal production undergoes rigorous separation to prevent any cross-contamination with non-Halal substances, guaranteeing the integrity and purity of each product.

Fred Elabed, CEO and Co-founder at Lab Alley, emphasized the significance of this achievement, stating, "Obtaining Halal certification is another pivotal step in Lab Alley's commitment to meeting the diverse needs of our customers. Beyond serving the Halal market, this certification underscores our dedication to providing products of the highest quality and safety standards."

He continued, "The increasing demand for Halal-certified products extends beyond religious preferences. Consumers across various demographics seek Halal products for their stringent quality assurance and superior safety measures."

Holly Elabed, CVO and Co-founder emphasized the broader significance of Halal certification within Lab Alley's product lineup. "Halal-certified chemicals enhance our existing range of natural products, including organic, kosher, and food-grade options. This certification reflects our awareness of market trends and strengthens our commitment to delivering clean, natural products that align with evolving consumer demands."

Lab Alley's Halal-certified chemicals are part of its ongoing efforts to expand its natural chemical product line, catering to a growing consumer base that values quality, safety, and compliance with stringent dietary and production standards.
