AUSTIN – Lab Alley is the leading e-commerce distributor of high-purity essential chemicals and high-quality lab supplies. The company was recently ranked on Inc. 5000's list of America's Fastest Growing Private Companies for the second consecutive year and Fred Elabed, Lab Alley's Chief Executive Officer and Co-Owner, has recently been invited to write for Inc.com through Inc. Masters.

Inc. Masters is an invitation-only paid membership community of Inc. 5000 winners dedicated to two ideas: 1) No one understands the rewards and challenges of running an Inc. 5000 company better than other honorees of the 5000, and 2) staying connected to your Inc. 5000 peers and to Inc. as well. Inc. Masters is exclusively available to the founders and CEOs of Inc. 5000 companies, regardless of the year their company made the Inc. 5000 list.

Topics that will be written by Mr. Elabed will be centered around essential chemicals and everything about them, which will include:

- Demystifying how society thinks about chemicals and learning how chemicals are essential for the environment and healthy living.
- Chemicals that are essential to our world and essential for life itself.
- Chemicals that are an essential component of the manufactured and natural world.
- Food Grade and Organic chemicals.
- How other companies and organizations are using essential chemicals to advance science, product innovation, research and development, and operational optimization.

Inc. Magazine has the most cutting-edge content, best practices and latest trends in business building, peer to peer networking, and is, overall, the best platform for any business to be successful. "Inc. Magazine is the only business magazine that I read!" exclaims Mr. Elabed. "It is the #1 brand in the subject of business and entrepreneurship, and it is the publication wholly devoted to your success and prosperity. Lab Alley loves the people working at Inc. They care and aggressively want to help entrepreneurs become successful."
